Cleanaholics

Crazy about cleaning? You are not alone! A channel in Britain, Discovery Home and Health, has started a reality TV show called Cleanaholics. It shows people who are mad about cleaning hard at work in their homes. The channel has had a national housework survey done. Did you know that British women spend an average of 16 hours a week cleaning? Nearly half of them say that they are addicted to it. Are you a cleanaholic? Try the Cleanaholics online quiz at www2.discoveryhealth.co.uk/cleanaholics, and find out!

Ben Nevis

Ben Nevis, a mountain in Scotland, is Britain's highest mountain. Every year, many visitors come. Unfortunately, many of them leave rubbish. This is picked up by volunteer litter pickers. These people pick up rubbish and don't get any money for their work. They do this because they love Ben Nevis! Last week, they found a very strange piece of rubbish. It looked like a grand piano! The next day, they saw that it was a church organ. 35 years ago, a man called Kenny Campbell pulled it up the mountain to get money for charity. He has also taken other heavy things up the mountain to get money for poor people. But why hasn't he taken them down again? Sorry, we don't know the answer to that!

Happy Birthday!

In Texas, Glendell Smith recently celebrated his 63rd birthday. As usual, he got a card from his brother Everett, who is 65. Before he opened the envelope, he knew what the greeting said. How? He and his brother have sent each other the same card for 42 years. Everett bought the card in 1964 and sent it to Glendell for his birthday. Glendell, who has always been a joker, sent it back to Everett for his birthday the next year. And that's how it started! Each time they send it, they add a written message. So now there are six pages of notes with the card! In 1999, something terrible happened! Glendell forgot to put the apartment number on the envelope when he sent the card to Everett! The card came back to Glendell ten days later. He then drove to his brother and gave him the card. Everett was very happy to see the card. He thought it had been lost forever!

Fire! Fire!

Hi, I'm Lucy and I'll tell you what happened to my neighbour last January. The moon had gone behind a cloud and there weren't many stars in the sky. It was a dark night. I saw a glow in my neighbour's kitchen. I thought he was having a midnight snack, so I went back to bed.

Soon, there was a burning smell in the air and I suspected something was wrong. I jumped out of bed at once and went downstairs to investigate. I saw fire coming out of my neighbour's kitchen. I shouted "Fire! Fire!", but there was no one nearby to hear my shouts for help.

I ran into my house, called the Fire Department and went back to my neighbour's house. I rang the doorbell, banged on the door and called out my neighbour's name but there was no response. I managed to break into the house and rescued a cat and a rabbit.

I tried to throw buckets of water through the kitchen window, but it was no use: the flames were too fierce. Luckily, a fire engine arrived and the firefighters put out the fire. They arrived in the nick of time, as the fire was going to spread to the other rooms in the house.

When my neighbour came back, he was sad because his kitchen was a wreck, but he thanked me for calling the Fire Department and for saving his pets. He wanted to give me some money as a reward, but I didn't take it.

Weeks later, my neighbour invited me to his new kitchen and gave me a medal that he had specially ordered from a factory. It made me very happy!

Best Songs of the Twentieth Century

Music lovers in the United States recently voted for the best songs of the 20th century. The competition was designed to help school children learn about music.

Two organizations have started a program for better music education in schools. The Recording Industry Association of America and the National Endowment for the Arts began the project with a competition called 'Songs of the Century'. Hundreds of music-lovers across the country voted for songs they liked best from the past one hundred years. Elected officials, people in the music industry, teachers, students and media representatives were among the voters. They chose from a list of more than 1000 recordings of historical importance. The voters chose 365 Songs of the Century. Children in 10,000 schools will hear the songs on school computers later this year. They will also learn about how music is written, performed and produced. The 'Songs of the Century' competition was divided into nine periods. The first period was from 1890 to 1920. During these years, many people came from other countries to live in the United States. Some of the music of this time showed their love for their new country. For example, voters chose a recording of 'America the Beautiful' sung by Louise Homer. They also liked the happy rhythms of a piano piece written and played by Scott Joplin called 'The Entertainer'. Voters chose 'Take Me Out to the Ballgame', sung by Billy Murray, as the top song of that time. It honours baseball, America's national sport. The voters also chose several kinds of music from the 1990s. They voted for the rewritten version of a sad song by Elton John called 'Candle in the Wind'. They also liked the happy sound of 'Livin' La Vida Loca' by Ricky Martin. The song voters liked best from the last ten years of the century was by Nirvana. It's called 'Smells like Teen Spirit'.
